BACKGROUND

This report presents the findings of a survey of residents of Firestone, Colorado. The survey was conducted to help guide the Town's planning, development and budgeting decisions.

The survey determined Firestone residents':

- ✓ Length of residence in Firestone
- ✓ The neighborhood in which people reside
- ✓ What people like about living in Firestone
- ✓ Input on parks, trails, services, employment, a central gathering place, open space, etc.
- ✓ Reaction to growth in Firestone
- ✓ Reaction to the level of maintenance of streets and parks
- ✓ Reaction to oil and gas exploration in the community
- ✓ If people use Firestone's Central Park
- ✓ Suggestions for development of Central Park
- ✓ For messaging purposes, how residents view Firestone
- ✓ If people are registered to vote
- ✓ Their age
- ✓ If respondents have children under the age of 18 living with them
- ✓ If people are gainfully employed, where they work

The survey was written by Kristi Ritter, Communications & Community Outreach Coordinator for the Town of Firestone, Wesley LaVanchy, Firestone Town Manager and Jeff Haugen, President of Left Brain Concepts, Inc. Left Brain compiled the results and prepared this report.

The survey was conducted via U.S. postal service in May and June, 2015 with the option of responding electronically. The Town also publicized the survey to Town residents and encouraged people to respond to either the written survey or electronically through the Town's webpage.

Every household in Firestone, including individual units in multi-family housing, was mailed a survey. This totaled 3,236 surveys from an exhaustive list of households provided by the Town from utility billing records. This is the most defensible methodology when conducting community surveys because residents of every household, including renters, were given an opportunity to respond. Respondents mailed their completed surveys to Left Brain Concepts, Inc. under its postage-paid Business Reply permit.

The survey asked a head of household, 18 years or older complete the survey. A total of 881 surveys were completed, 729 via mail and 152 electronically. The maximum margin of error for a sample of 881 is $\pm 3.3\%$ at the 95% level of confidence.

Twenty-one surveys were returned as undeliverable. This is very common in community surveys because no database is ever completely up to date. Thus, 881 surveys were completed out of a possible 3,215 good addresses. This is a response rate of 27%.

As is customary in analyzing and reporting results of community surveys, responses were adjusted to virtually mirror the demographics of Firestone residents aged 18 or older as reported in the 2010 U.S. Census.

Further, people gave 1,102 comments (an average of 2.3 specific comments per respondent) which is also a very high number. The vast majority of the input centered on the need for restaurants and retail shopping, roads, trails, open space and parks, that people like the performance of Town management, suggestions for town policies and that people love life in Firestone.

CONCLUSIONS & RECOMMENDATIONS

Current quality of life

- Firestone residents are attached to the town and engaged regarding community planning as evidenced by the high response to this survey, the percentage of people who provided comments and the number of comments and suggestions offered.
- Residents feel that the Town is providing a high quality of life. They are very happy because of the small town atmosphere, sense of community and safety and feel that Firestone is a great place to raise a family. When given the opportunity to fault life in Firestone, positive comments outnumbered negative ones by a 9:1 margin.
- As is the case in similar communities, the lowest quality of life issue concerns oil and gas exploration.

Improving quality of life

- Firestone can improve residents' satisfaction by maintaining the level of safety and emergency services, attracting restaurants (virtually everyone who commented on the matter voiced a preference for sit-down restaurants over fast food), attracting retailers (from comments, there is a preference for a combination of a Target and other big box retailers and specialty retailers), improving the roads and surrounding landscaping, adding to and maintaining, parks, trails and open space, building the recreation center and developing Central Park.

Planning

- The challenge for the Town of course is that improving the infrastructure, building the recreation center, developing Central Park (and accommodating the preference for a more robust development) and building and maintaining existing parks and trails are high-cost items that likely will require more budget than the town's bedroom community resources will allow.
- Thus, when Firestone cannot accommodate all of residents' desires, it should communicate the reasons with as much detail as possible.
- Firestone should explore with senior management at similar towns that have faced the challenges that Firestone is currently experiencing to determine how they addressed the growth challenges that Firestone is experiencing and build on lessons learned, avoid negative outcomes and anticipate likely resident sentiment and objections.

Branding and messaging

- Firestone's branding and messaging should center on the things that people value most in Firestone consisting of safety, the small town atmosphere, being quiet, being family oriented and having residents who have a strong sense of community.
